

Steven Strachan

Prior to his involvement with Team Alliance and ACN, Mr. Steven Strachan was an award winning producer and executive producer in the television industry. He produced three Super Bowl commercials, including the top commercial in 2001. Success surrounded him and Steve would not settle for being second-best.

However, the unfortunate events of 9-11 adversely affected the television industry to a significant degree. Being a great family man, Steve wanted to find another means to support his family. He found ACN and began to build a tremendous organization throughout the Western United States, and later on, throughout the entire country and internationally as well. Due to his success in ACN, he was able to retire from production at age 41.

He has a heart of gold and has helped many people across the country realize some of their dreams and goals through the company. He does so with great energy and passion. He will soon be one of the top producing Regional Vice Presidents. With the residual income at that position, and his personal goals include never having to worry about supporting his family financially and financing his own feature films within the next few years.
